TITLE 22 EXAMINING BOARDS
PART 9 TEXAS MEDICAL BOARD
CHAPTER 172 TEMPORARY AND LIMITED LICENSES, SUBCHAPTER C,
 LIMITED LICENSES

§172.13. Conceded Eminence.

(a) Pursuant to the authority of §155.006, Texas Occupations Code, the [The] board may issue a limited license to an applicant licensed or educated in another state, territory, Canadian province or country [pursuant to the authority of §155.006, Texas Occupations Code,] who has [by virtue of the applicant's] conceded eminence and authority in the applicant's specialty.

(b) "Conceded eminence and authority in the applicant's specialty," as used in this section, shall mean that the physician has achieved a high level of academic or professional recognition, domestically or internationally, for excellence in research, teaching, or the practice of medicine within the applicant's specialty.[, as evidenced by objective factors, including academic appointments, length of time in a profession, scholarly publications and presentations, professional accomplishments, and awards.]

(c) In determining whether an applicant has recognized conceded eminence and authority in the applicant's specialty, the Board shall consider whether: [An applicant for a license based on conceded eminence must complete an application showing that the applicant:]

(1) the applicant has been the recipient of professional honors and awards, and professional recognition in the international or domestic medical community, for achievements, contributions, or advancements in the field of medicine, or medical research as evidenced by objective factors, including, but not limited to: [is recommended to the board by the dean, president, or chief academic officer of:]

(A) publications in recognized scientific, medical, or medical research journals, including American peer review journals; [a school of medicine in this state accredited by the LCME or AOA;]

(B) being the recipient or nominee for international or national awards for distinguished contributions to the advancement of medicine or medical research; [The University of Texas Health Center at Tyler;]

(C) acknowledgement of expertise from recognized American authorities in the applicant's field of medical specialty; and [The University of Texas M.D. Anderson Cancer Center; or]

(D) other professional accomplishments as determined meritorious in the discretion of the Board. [a program of graduate medical education, accredited by the Accreditation Council for Graduate Medical Education, that exceeds the requirements for eligibility for first board certification in the discipline;]

(2) the recommending institution is unable to recruit, after good faith effort, a physician with the same sub-specialty who is: either already licensed in Texas or is eligible for an unrestricted
